Basic Uses: NEVAMAR brand chemical resistant laminates are manufactured for application to interior horizontal surfaces where a superior wear and chemical resistant surface is required. In addition to providing resistance to chemical spills, it provides excellent resistance to scuff and abrasion.

Limitations: High pressure laminates are not recommended for exterior use. NEVAMAR chemical resistant laminate consists of several sheets of phenolic resin saturated kraft paper (the core) covered by a specially formulated chemical resistant resin. These sheets are consolidated under heat and pressure into a thermosetting plastic sheet. Sheets are then sanded and trimmed to ensure proper bonding.

Recommended Colors:

ES2003 - Sienna Essence

Finish : Textured, Mirror, Hi-luster, Supermatte Finishes

Gloss: Low gloss - High gloss

Wilsonart HD

This product means high durability, drama and definition. High definition is a whole new kind of laminate where technology and nature have come together to create amazing optical dimension, clarity and with wear resistance that's 4 times that of the industry standard. Out of HD comes AEON technology.

High pressure decorative laminate comprises layers of resin-treated papers which are processed under high heat and pressure to create a strong, flexible decorative surface. AEON technology revolutionizes the way laminate is made. AEON offers 3 to 5 times more scuff and scratch resistance (to other Wilsonart laminates) and 3 to 4 times more wear resistance (versus the industry benchmark NEMA LD 3-2005).

Designed and Manufactured in Italy

The LPR high pressure laminate is made with:

A core of variable thickness obtained with kraft paper treated with phenolic thermoplastic resins.

One or two decorative sides made with cellulose paper impregnated with thermosetting melamine resins, which give the surface resistance typical of laminates. The above are pressed for over an hour at a 100 kg/cm² pressure and at a temperature on the paper above 130°C. The surface finish is embossed in the laminate through patterned steel press-plates.
